

INTRODUCTION

Executive Order 13488, issued by President George W. Bush on January 5th, 2009, established critical guidelines for reciprocity in the federal government's hiring and suitability determination process.

The order mandates that executive branch agencies accept fitness and suitability determinations made by other agencies, eliminating redundant background investigations for positions of public trust. This promotes operational efficiency while maintaining rigorous standards for federal employment and contractor access.

It further requires agencies to conduct periodic reinvestigations for individuals in positions of trust, ensuring ongoing compliance with federal security protocols. This foundational policy continues to shape federal personnel management and interagency coordination to this day.

WHEREBY: Ladies and gentlemen, the rapid advancement of deepfake artificial intelligence represents one of the most serious threats to truth, security, and public trust in the digital age.

This technology enables the creation of hyper-realistic videos, audio, and images that are virtually indistinguishable from reality, allowing malicious actors to impersonate executives, fabricate statements, and manipulate events with unprecedented ease.

The damages are profound: financial fraud exceeding one billion dollars annually in the U.S. alone, widespread disinformation that undermines elections and institutions, severe reputational harm to individuals and organizations, and the erosion of societal trust where authentic evidence is increasingly questioned.

As these capabilities become more accessible, the risks to national security, corporate integrity, and personal privacy continue to escalate, demanding vigilant leadership, robust detection technologies, and proactive policy measures to safeguard our information environment.

WHEREBY: THE EXECUTIVE ORDER FROM THIS ADMINISTRATION, NOT THE OTHER ASSOCIATION "T." BUT THIS ADMINISTRATION'S ISSUED AND THEREFORE RELEASED ISSUANCE OF "ONE EXECUTIVE," ORDER - PROVIDED IN THE DURATION OF THE OFFICE OF THE UNITED STATES PRESIDENCY NAMELY, THE TWO THOUSAND AND TWENTY INTO TWENTY ONE ELECTION CYCLE. THIS EXECUTIVE ORDER [EO] # 13984 AMENDED TO EXECUTIVE ORDER (E) # 13489.

THE OFFICE

The constitutional job description of the President is defined in Article II of the United States Constitution.

The executive power is vested solely in the President, who serves a four-year term. Before assuming office, the President must take the oath: "I do solemnly swear that I will faithfully execute the Office of President of the United States, and will to the best of my Ability, preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States."

As Commander in Chief, the President leads the armed forces and state militias when called into federal service. The President can require written opinions from department heads, grant reprieves and pardons for federal offenses except in impeachment cases, negotiate treaties with Senate approval by a two-thirds vote, and nominate ambassadors, Supreme Court justices, and other officers — also subject to Senate confirmation.

The President must periodically deliver the State of the Union address to Congress, recommend legislation, convene or adjourn Congress in extraordinary circumstances, receive foreign ambassadors, and — most critically — "take Care that the Laws be faithfully executed." The President commissions all officers of the United States.

This framework establishes the President as chief executive, head of state, and commander, with powers checked by the Senate and bound by the duty to uphold the Constitution above all.

WHEREFORE:

The War Powers Resolution of 1973, commonly known as the War Powers Act, was passed by Congress over President Nixon's veto to reassert congressional authority over the use of military force after the Vietnam War.

Its core purpose is to ensure the collective judgment of both Congress and the President applies to committing U.S. forces to hostilities. It requires the President to consult with Congress "in every possible instance" before introducing forces into hostilities or situations where imminent involvement is clearly indicated.

The President must submit a detailed written report to the Speaker of the House and the President pro tempore of the Senate within 48 hours in three scenarios:

- When forces are introduced into hostilities or situations where hostilities are imminent.
- When combat-equipped forces are sent into foreign territory, airspace, or waters (with limited exceptions).
- When the number of combat-equipped forces in a foreign nation is substantially increased.

Each report must detail the circumstances, the constitutional and legislative authority relied upon, and the estimated scope and duration of the involvement. Presidents must also provide any additional information Congress requests and file periodic updates at least every six months while forces remain engaged.

The resolution sets a 60-day clock — starting from the report or when one was required — after which the President must withdraw forces unless Congress declares war, passes specific statutory authorization, or extends the period. An additional 30 days is allowed for safe withdrawal if certified in writing. Congress can also direct removal of forces at any time via concurrent resolution.

Regarding records and archives, the law requires these reports to be submitted in writing and formally transmitted to congressional leadership. They are referred to the House Foreign Affairs and Senate Foreign Relations Committees, recorded in the Congressional Record, and preserved as official executive communications in congressional archives and databases like Congress.gov. These documents form a permanent legislative record available for oversight, historical review, and public access through the National Archives.

In practice, every administration since 1973 has submitted over 130 such reports, though debates continue over compliance, the scope of “hostilities,” and the law’s overall effectiveness in constraining executive power.

“WHICH DO NOT INCLUDE CONTAINMENT WITH THE INTENT TO DEFRAUD.”

The War Powers Resolution of 1973, also known as the War Powers Act, was enacted over President Nixon’s veto to restore Congress’s constitutional role in decisions involving military force following the Vietnam War.

It requires the President to consult with Congress in every possible instance before introducing United States Armed Forces into hostilities or into situations where imminent involvement in hostilities is clearly indicated.

The President must submit a formal written report to the Speaker of the House and the President pro tempore of the Senate within 48 hours whenever forces are introduced:

- Into hostilities or situations where imminent hostilities are clearly indicated
- Into the territory, airspace, or waters of a foreign nation while equipped for combat (with narrow exceptions)
- In numbers which substantially enlarge United States Armed Forces equipped for combat already located in a foreign nation

Each report must specify the circumstances necessitating the introduction of forces, the constitutional and legislative authority under which the action is taken, and the estimated scope and duration of the hostilities or involvement.

The resolution establishes a 60-day clock from the time the report is submitted or required. Unless Congress declares war, passes specific statutory authorization for the use of force, or extends the period, the President must terminate the use of forces after 60 days. An additional 30 days is permitted solely for the safe withdrawal of troops if the President certifies in writing that it is needed.

Congress retains the authority to direct the President to remove forces at any time through a concurrent resolution. The President is also required to provide Congress with any further information it requests regarding the deployment and to submit periodic reports:

This introduction marks the one-year anniversary of the official start of our Nations Second and lawful Civil War. For the duration of the past decade our great country has been under attack in what some would call the "Third World War" affecting the deepest highest places of our government using internal warfare fought with silent weaponry. These weapons will be identified, targeted, exposed, and with those who wish to administrate terminated from the threat of continuance to be able to carry out their unified strategies of world hegemony.

FURTHER INTRODUCTION

Today, our defense as yesteryears remains equal to our united able body men and women now brought forward again in remembrance for the purposes not to deviate from unity. The virtues brought forward in remembrance again for the purposes to protect the minds defense from silent attacks and quiet psychological warfare on our invaluable servants. The open eyes must be exercised regularly as to remain keen in protecting your own best interests, which is our best interests, our National Defense Interests. No one is qualified for this project found choosing to remain in a place of comfortable doubt and safe cower. The qualified are those who cannot choose to remain in a place of endangering our National Security from their inability to 1. Pay No Attention 2. Don't Listen to That 3. Accept Unqualified Advice and 4. Disregard Truth. The Qualified do not naturally lack the elements demanded for serving to protect human society, one of them being fire on the inside, a furnace devouring cold objectivity, and can acquire the trained ability to do more than just analyze but implement strategic lawful planning of combatting identified internal enemy attacks, as able to without guilt or fear discuss their festering noticed observations.

Every able-bodied man and women, does not mean they are qualified men and women able to ascertain the inevitable truth of the National matter beginning to show its self in a slight way as to identify whether or not the defense departments personnel will accept or reject the foreign introductions. The qualified have the ability to utilize their discretion in alignment to their identified true source of defense and offensive power within the realms that unqualified natural men and women reject, this being the place of truth first found within our own minds, then brought forward to the attention of the courts records, a court that can exist on pen and paper with signatures of witnesses with their thumb prints and DNA swabs buried in the desert in a hole simultaneously sending coordinates to qualified tested advocates of our nations upgraded justice systems. The qualified are those who discuss observations frequently and find more conclusions with others who remain in the state of hunting our internal enemies with the same similar intellectual capacity.

The qualified who have the ability to believe the truth, the qualified who recognize our internal enemy's operations are headquartered in the place of immediate dismissal and rejections. The Qualified do not possess the human defect of inability they do not waste their time with the unqualified after two point five attempts, attempting to elevate natural men and women to their yet to be discovered increased intelligence capacity galvanizing their discretion with humility creates the powerful atmospheres of what our future forces keep. The Cultural Values the critical mission of morality and understanding which overcomes religious laws by the supernatural grace that our new forces have as the first forces who refuse to agonize with those who do not possess the candid power. Ruthlessly approaching enemies is our real policy, a policy that equates to United States Policy in which those who are reading this policy are directed to the requirements of our Nations people who rely on special forces to be fully equipped and this solves the problems with the solutions the people who provide this knowledge and immaterial equipment to easily execute remedies.

This introduction to this manual immediately becomes a cannon, and those who read it may become at their own discretion canonized. The knowledge within this text must be overcome that the state of internal warfare exists and the domestic warfare between corporate, political, international, or personal groups, and within the public sector, have already conquered our nation once with their silent weapons keeping you from seeing the quiet wars, preventing you from the senses it takes to be able to operate with to not only identify the workers, but to further be able to identify their dark articulate evil strategies. Qualified elevate with the gift of their own internal recognition they can overcome their natural self and bring their whole man or woman to a place of realization. When realization takes place the quiet understanding, the whispers of speaking to others awakened, the solitude is found where growth and power is waiting for the chosen, the selected, where some have grasped fraternity, sorority, the Unity of the Spirit of America, the few & proud.

The new understanding is not that of the misled to the never ending war on terrorism by design to keep our best spent for nothing, but something says to those who are qualified this war was victorious, we as the forces have overcome to an upgraded place of declarations within ourselves, not dictated by pens, men, paper, or anything else material, but that in fact we as able bodied men and women choose to become fully equipped with our new found knowledge, a knowledge that always existed, a Gnosis from the past, rejected as natural men and women unable to become more than natural from the defect of our natural ability to disbelieve, but that in fact the final war is our victorious war over evil.

The state of domestic warfare exists it has existed and it has been in our Nation for a long time, so long in fact that the natural man has no ability or concept to ascertain how long. It is only the top Generals, and Military that really know the extent of our Nations treason, and time frames, the Pentagon on a 50/50 split needs conversions, we need intelligent conversions, the qualified know how to whisper in the ears of those who are not awake to their fast approaching capture from the qualified, the ones who have identified our awake enemies, our overt internal enemies who know what they are doing and have been united to our nations defeat for decades entering centuries internationally speaking. It must be understood that the state of war exists everywhere within every agency and to identify the advocates of our national destruction to usher in a foreign plan not our own is well known.

It must be understood the state of domestic warfare exists between our sovereign nation and those who wish to conquer our sovereignty, those who wish to terminate our nation as a whole by destroying any chance of our forces having an intelligence explosion within the culture of all our forces beginning within our highly trained special forces communities. It is not in our communities best interests to accidentally without our consent become victims to masterful plan engineering whenever any person or group of persons purposefully enters into a position of power or influence over our internal communities, we as the awake intelligent qualified personnel must realize without full knowledge and consent aligned to our original foundational systems infrastructures require your identifications, your defensive observations, and your powerful pushing weight on civilian enforcements heads.

Mostly natural men who naturally pursue wealth, power, influence, we find have found them to be like magnets on opposite polarity attaching to others who share their same economic conquest strategies, and further we have found when they identify other likeminded individuals like themselves enter into the state of enterprise from association. The decisions made in the spirit of Natural Men equates to death and this is a law that will prove true too late every time. Natural Men and Women, Natural Politicians, Natural Bankers, Natural Businessmen, Natural Ambition, will cause dire consequences and make all our forces jobs more difficult the further they neglect the maxims of this truth. The connection between the two are how long permitted, and how long our laws our neglected.

It comes to the matter of time as a matter of fact these natural men are in time our future enemies, exist in a place of their own servitude, neglecting their fellow men or women, they expect to be served by the lower in viewpoint, and protected by forces who are no longer natural men or women, but in fact those who qualify or disqualify natural amateurs. As to conclude for our Introduction of National Defense, the declaration of my intent continues to be, and will forever be, your restoration, our restoration, and our Nations restoration, this writing should be secured, but it is not required to be secured from natural scrutiny, we have and continue to battle best, we are the ones who have already won the war, the final war exists in the demolition of suppression, formally recognizing all battles without our enemies defensive disapprovals, and finally the social engineering stage of implementing automation and removing natural men and women who naturally make mistakes and remain in a place of pride filled belief they are in fact helping all of humanity, when clearly "They" are not.

THEREFORE:

The President's actual compensation is governed by Title 3, Section 102 of the U.S. Code, which sets the salary at $400,000 per year. – There for the President of the United States Chapter 105

<https://www.govinfo.gov/content/pkg/USCODE-2011-title3/html/USCODE-2011-title3-chap2-sec102.htm>

As of May 2026, former U.S. presidents receive a taxpayer-funded annual pension roughly equal to a Cabinet Secretary's salary—$250,600 in 2025. Established by the Former Presidents Act of 1958, this lifetime, taxable pension begins immediately upon leaving office, along with allowances for staff, office space, and Secret Service protection.

SUMMARY

The legal basis for the U.S. President's pay starts with the Constitution itself. Article II, Section 1, Clause 7 says the President shall receive a compensation for his services at stated times, which cannot be increased or decreased during the term for which he was elected. He also cannot receive any other emolument from the United States or any state during that period.

This setup, known as the Domestic Emoluments Clause, protects the President's independence. The Founders didn't want Congress holding the power to starve or enrich him mid-term to influence his decisions. Alexander Hamilton in Federalist 73 put it plainly: Congress shouldn't be able to weaken the President's resolve by messing with his necessities or corrupt him through greed.

Congress sets the actual amount through law. The current salary of $400,000 per year comes from 3 U.S.C. § 102, last raised by Congress in 1999 and effective at the start of George W.

Bush's term in 2001. It gets paid monthly. On top of that, there's a $50,000 non-taxable expense allowance for official duties—unused portions go back to the Treasury.

constitutional guardrails kick in. Any change to the base salary can't take effect until the next president is in office. That's the Founders' safeguard against Congress using the paycheck as leverage.

The President also gets travel, security, staff, and housing at the White House and Camp David, but those are government operational costs, not personal pay. Historically, George Washington actually refused his salary and just took reimbursements for expenses. Trump donated his entire $400,000 salary each year, usually to different federal agencies.

Bottom line: the salary is constitutionally protected from mid-term manipulation, set by statute, and paid like clockwork every month.

the salary's remained frozen at four hundred thousand dollars since two thousand one. Congress has debated raising it over the years, but nothing's passed. The non-taxable expense allowance stays at fifty thousand.

The legal basis for the compensation of the President of the United States is rooted in the U.S. Constitution, implemented and adjusted through federal statute, and shaped by historical precedent and judicial interpretation. This framework balances the need for a capable executive with safeguards against corruption, undue influence, and legislative coercion.

Constitutional Foundation: Article II, Section 1, Clause 7

The primary legal authority is found in Article II, Section 1, Clause 7 of the U.S. Constitution:

"The President shall, at stated Times, receive for his Services, a Compensation, which shall neither be encreased nor diminished during the Period for which he shall have been elected, and he shall not receive within that Period any other Emolument from the United States, or any of them."

This clause establishes three core principles:

1. Guaranteed Compensation: The President must receive pay for services. This ensures the office is accessible beyond the independently wealthy.
2. Fixed During Term: Compensation cannot be increased or decreased during the President's elected term. This protects presidential independence. Congress cannot use the power of the purse to pressure, reward, or punish the President mid-term.
3. Domestic Emoluments Clause: The President may not accept any other "Emolument" (profit, gain, or advantage) from the federal government or any state during the term. This prevents self-dealing or hidden compensation. (A separate Foreign Emoluments Clause in Article I, Section 9 applies more broadly.)

The Framers designed this at the 1787 Constitutional Convention to address concerns from the Articles of Confederation era and monarchical influences. Alexander Hamilton explained in Federalist No. 73 that without this protection, Congress could "weaken [the President's] fortitude by operating on his necessities, nor corrupt his integrity by appealing to his avarice." The clause passed with strong support, reflecting fears of legislative overreach.

Statutory Implementation: 3 U.S.C. § 102

Congress sets the actual amount via legislation, as the Constitution does not specify a figure. The current law is codified in Title 3, United States Code, Section 102:

"The President shall receive in full for his services during the term for which he shall have been elected compensation in the aggregate amount of $400,000 a year, to be paid monthly, and in addition an expense allowance of $50,000 to assist in defraying expenses relating to or resulting from the discharge of his official duties, for which expense allowance no accounting, other than for income tax purposes, shall be made by him."

- Salary: $400,000 annually, paid monthly. This has been in effect since January 20, 2001 (start of George W. Bush's term), following the 1999 adjustment (Pub. L. 106-58) that doubled it from $200,000.
- Expense Allowance: $50,000 non-taxable (for income tax purposes) to cover official expenses. Unused portions typically revert to the Treasury; the President does not need to account for it beyond tax reporting.

This structure has remained stable. The salary is taxable as ordinary income, while the expense allowance has specific tax treatment.

Historical Adjustments and Context

Presidential pay has been raised only five times since 1789:

- 1789: $25,000 (George Washington)
- 1873: $50,000
- 1909: $75,000
- 1949: $100,000 (+ $50,000 expense allowance)
- 1969: $200,000
- 1999/2001: $400,000

These changes apply only to the next term, respecting the Constitution's prohibition on mid-term adjustments.

Notable Precedents:

- George Washington initially declined his salary but accepted expense reimbursements.
- Donald Trump donated his $400,000 annual salary to various federal agencies.

- Benefits like White House residence, Camp David, travel, and security are operational government expenses, not personal compensation, and fall under separate appropriations.

Additional Legal Cement

- Pension and Post-Presidency: Under the Former Presidents Act (3 U.S.C. § 102 note), former presidents receive a pension equal to the salary of a Cabinet Secretary (currently around that level), plus staff and office allowances. This is separate from active-duty pay.
- Judicial Interpretation: Courts have addressed emoluments in cases involving private business interests during service, emphasizing the clause's anti-corruption purpose. The fixed-compensation rule has seen little litigation due to its clarity.
- Policy Rationale: The salary is intentionally modest compared to top private-sector roles, reflecting public service ideals while remaining competitive enough to attract qualified leaders. Periodic congressional debates weigh inflation, comparability to other officials, and fiscal restraint.

This framework—constitutional rigidity paired with statutory flexibility—has endured for over 235 years, ensuring the President's financial independence while subjecting pay levels to democratic oversight through Congress. It exemplifies the separation of powers in action.

CONCLUSION

The Former Presidents Act of 1958, or FPA, was passed to ensure former presidents could maintain a dignified life after leaving office without being forced to commercialize their status or struggle financially.

It was largely triggered by Harry Truman's post-presidency financial difficulties—he left the White House nearly broke and refused lucrative private offers because he felt they would demean the office. Congress acted to prevent that, explicitly designing the law to "maintain the dignity" of the presidency. The core idea was that the person who held the highest office shouldn't have to scramble for money or turn down public duties due to lack of resources.

Pension Details

The centerpiece is a lifetime taxable pension equal to the salary of a Cabinet secretary, currently around two hundred fifty thousand dollars a year. It starts the day they leave office and is paid monthly by the Treasury. It pauses only if they take another paid federal position. A former president's widow can receive twenty thousand dollars annually if she waives other pensions, but it stops if she remarries before sixty or takes a paid federal role.

Additional Benefits

Beyond the pension, the General Services Administration provides:

- Office space — Furnished and equipped anywhere in the U.S. the former president chooses.
- Staff allowance — Up to one hundred fifty thousand dollars in the first thirty months, then ninety-six thousand dollars annually for aides who report only to them.
- Security and travel — Up to a million dollars per former president and five hundred thousand for their spouse for related expenses, though lifetime Secret Service protection is the main safeguard, restored by law in twenty thirteen for all modern presidents.

They also get transition funding for the first few months, health benefits in some cases, and franking privileges for official mail. These aren't just perks—they're meant to let former presidents handle the flood of correspondence, speaking requests, and public service expected of them without going broke.

Connection to Presidential Dignity

The dignity angle runs through the whole law. The explicit goal was to free ex-presidents from financial pressure that might force them to "demean their status as elder statesmen." Truman himself turned down corporate board seats and paid gigs because he believed a former president shouldn't cash in on the office. The FPA was Congress's way of saying the institution matters more than any individual's bank account—the country has an interest in its past leaders living respectably, not desperately.

Eligibility is narrow: you must have served as president and not been removed via impeachment and conviction. That's why a president removed from office wouldn't get these benefits.

It's a small but symbolic investment in the continuity and prestige of the office. The presidency isn't just a job—it's an institution, and treating its former holders with a baseline of security and respect reinforces that for everyone who holds it.
